L ocal

There's no need to travel far or at awkward times. LAN members meet at apiaries belonging to members of their group, when it suits them and where is suits them.

A ctivity

LAN Groups consist of beekeepers at all stages - beginner, improvers and experts alike. Concentration is on hands-on activity, but you need only do as much as you feel confident about.

There's expert tuition at each gathering; you learn at your own pace as your own confidence improves.

N

etworks

Meet up with other people just like you. Learn from real live situations. If you need help, there's always someone who can give advice or come to your assistance.

But that's not all!

Workshops

The Association holds a Workshop normally each year, at which you can try your hand at various other bee type activities, such as polish making, wax molding, encaustic art, disease control and microscopy.

Garden Meetings

We often meet in different Members' gardens. These are usually more social occasions, but of course we also get involved with a bit of beekeeping!

Talks and Discussions

During non-active months indoor meetings are held with range of speakers on various subjects - not all directly related to beekeeping.

Annual Honey Show

Every year there's a chance to show your skill and the quality of your bees' work at the Annual Honey Show.
